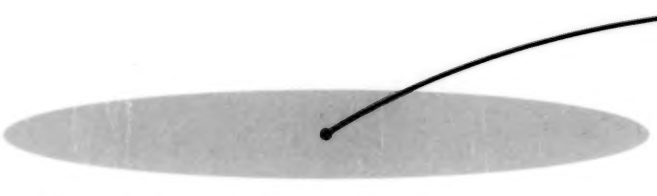
Office of Research Development

Research is your future

The Radiological Society of North America's Office of Research Development is designed to cultivate radiologic research by increasing funding opportunities and offering educational programs that teach participants how to attain those opportunities. Researchers are given the momentum to answer probing questions, such as "how" and "why".

Access RSNA's Web site, RSNA Link (www.rsna.org), and learn about ORD's premier database of funding opportunities and the ORD educational programs. You'll also learn about RSNA's Research and Education Fund awards that further encourage excellence in radiologic research.



Because ORD is dedicated to enhancing the quality and volume of research to help revolutionize patient care worldwide, opportunities available through the database are not limited to RSNA members. The ORD invites all radiologic researchers to discover the most up-to-date innovations in research on RSNA Link.

Cultivate your spirit of discovery and participate in the future of radiologic science through the ORD database and educational programs.

Access the ORD database at www.rsna.org or contact ORD by phone at 630/368-3756, by fax at 630/571-7837 or by e-mail at seck@rsna.org.

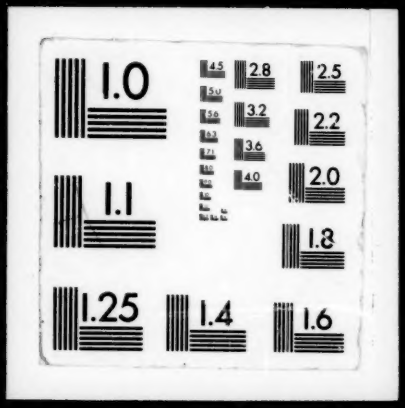
Science to Practice

RSNA '98

Stay tuned for the RSNA '98 Annual Meeting!

RSNA '98 offers an impressive schedule of lectures, orations, symposia, panel discussions, poster sessions and workshops. These educational programs are designed to benefit every radiological professional.

RSNA '98 attendees will be able to learn about the results of new research, while reviewing basic knowledge and skills. This meeting will also allow assessment of the latest in radiologic equipment and services. Attendees will be given the opportunity to exchange ideas in radiologic science and technology. Professionals are able to study on their own at the scientific and *info*RAD exhibits.



These are just some of the invaluable benefits of attending RSNA '98.

Member information mails in April 1998. Non-member information mails in June 1998.
